

LIVELY INSTITUTE AT MINOCQUA

Teachers Present in Large Numbers—All Take Great Interest in Program

One of the most successful teachers' institute ever held in Minocqua, occurred Friday and Saturday, Nov. 3 and 4. It was a joint meeting of the teachers of Vilas and Oneida counties under the supervision of Superintendents Cook and Lowell. They were assisted by President McCaskill of the Superior State Normal School, the faculty of the Training School and teachers of both counties. More than 60 teachers were in attendance.

President McCaskill presented some very useful and usable material. He showed, for instance, how agriculture could be made more interesting for the children. He advocated bird study and showed in detail just how the subject could be handled. He also advised the value of supervised play and taught some games by having the teachers play them.

Mr. Dresden spoke on "Waste in the recitation" and gave some valuable hints, and Miss Sutton advised "Opening exercises" suggesting some valuable material.

The most valuable part of the entire program, however, was the work done by some of the teachers themselves. They presented various topics and as the teaching of penmanship, geography and arithmetic. These were especially valuable, because they were the result of actual school room work done with children of Oneida and Vilas counties and therefore, practical, rather than theoretical.

The net result of the institute cannot help but be greatly increased efficiency in the district schools of Oneida and Vilas counties.

A FAREWELL PARTY

About fifteen friends held a farewell party in honor of Mrs. T. McDermott at the home of Mrs. F. Keenan on Mercer street last Monday night. The ladies played cards and enjoyed themselves generally until 10:30 when lunch was served after which Mrs. McDermott was presented with a beautiful gold ring which bore the emblem of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Hibernians. Mrs. McDermott left Tuesday night for Ladysmith where she will reside in the future.

DANCING SCHOOL FRIDAY

Owing to the fact that the paper was late coming out last week, Mr. J. J. Holstein, the dancing teacher, will be here again Friday Nov. 10th to organize a dancing class and everybody desiring to join is asked to be at the Hall that evening. If the people of Rhinelander want a dancing school they must turn out as it will be decided that night if the school will be started or not. Terms for lessons: Gentlemen $6.00 for ten lessons, Ladies $5.00, private lessons, $1.00, single lessons $1.00.

BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

Herman Zander will give a benefit moving picture entertainment at the Opera House, Nov. 14, for the Rebekah lodge, to help purchase a new piano. All interested in the order will remember the date and attend this entertainment.

ONE ACRE'S CROP

F. C. Kuehen of Monico raised on one acre of land this season, seven hundred bushels of carrots, forty bushels of rutabagas and ten bushels of turnips. An investigation of crops shows that Oneida county is as good territory as any in the state, but it has not been so well advertised. Oneida county has a future.

THE COMMITTEE OF TWELVE would be pleased to receive evidence from anyone regarding violations of the laws in this city and county.

CRUCIFIX DEDICATION SERVICE

Appropriate Exercises Given—Several Priests Take Part

About one hundred fifty people were in attendance at the dedication of the church monument held at St. Mary's cemetery last Sunday afternoon. The monument is nineteen feet high and is in the form of a crucifix. The body of Christ on this is life size. The crucifix which is an excellent piece of workmanship, is made of Bedford rock and will cost in the neighborhood of seven hundred fifty dollars.

The ceremony consisted of the dedication of the monument in this three priests assisted.

After this there were services for the dead. The choir from St. Mary's church rendered the music for the occasion.

CLUB WOMEN HAVE TREAT

A Well Selected Musical Program Is Rendered in Most Pleasing Manner

The Woman's Club met at the Library Tuesday, Nov. 7 and in place of the program slated for that day were surprised to find a finely prepared recital by some of Rhinelander's excellent musicians assisted by Prof. Hayner. The first number:

- 6th Air Variations—De Berliot
- "Gloria a Ladia"—Rossini
- Mr. LaMotte—Violinist
- Miss McQueen—Pianist
- "Calm as the Night"—Gottze
- Messrs. Tompkins and Wilson
- Miss McQueen—Pianist
- "Minuet"—Paderewski
- Miss McQueen
- "When Love Was Young"—Piano Duet—Engelman
- Mrs. Hampton and Mrs. Stiles
- "Nocturne"—Kalliwoda
- "Berceuse"—Gottlerman
- Prof. Hayner—Violinist
- Mrs. Hampton—Pianist

This musical treat was heartily enjoyed by the club women and this beautiful thought came to the writers' mind as very appropriate to the occasion.

"The music in my heart I bore, Long after it was heard no more."

In the business meeting called at the close of the musical program, the educational committee informed the club that they had found some lines in which they thought aggressive work should be done. The members gave their unanimous endorsement to the plan suggested by the committee at the close of the meeting. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

STATE ELECTIONS ARE OVER

Massachusetts Does Not Support Taft and Aldrich

The state and city elections which were looked forward to as the signs of the times have passed and speculation will now cease.

Massachusetts, an overwhelming republican state which was to be the guide as to the attitude of the people towards Taft and the Payne-Aldrich tariff returned Governor Foss a democrat to the executive chair.

Kentucky returned to the democratic side. New Jersey and New York both in the clutch of Wall St. made republican gains. Philadelphia was lost to Penrose and the republican ring. A large proportion of the large cities went democratic but the surprising thing is that a large number of the smaller cities of the east elected socialist mayors.

Where reactionary republicans were strongest the social democrats made their greatest gains.

Miss Althea Wade of Antigo and Miss Hazel Farley of Monico attended the Urban dance held in this city last night.

ANTIGO VICTORS IN HARD FIGHT

Old Time Rivalry in Foot Ball Game—Rhinelander Too Light for Antagonists

Last Saturday the local gridiron heroes were defeated by the Antigo warriors by a score of 20 to 0.

At the first of the game it looked as if the local boys had the best of their opponents; they rushed them down the field as if they were not in the game at all but when through a fumble Antigo obtained the ball they managed to advance it to their twenty yard line. Here Rhinelander held them to two downs, without a gain, this forced them to punt. The ball was blocked by one of the local players but on account of the slippery ground he could not hold it and the ball bounded out of his arms and rolled over the Antigo line, where Wall, the fast Antigo end, fell on it; thus giving the first touch down of the game to Antigo.

In the next quarter McCellen managed to get away around the end and carried the ball across Rhinelander's goal for another touch down. This discouraged the local lads somewhat and before the whistle sounded the close of the second quarter the score stood 15 to 0, Antigo having made another touch down.

During the last half of the game Antigo did nothing but hammer the guards and tackles of the local line and their weight generally carried them through for their gains but at critical times Rhinelander's held. But in the last of the third quarter a tandem play through left tackle netted Antigo another touch down making the score twenty to 0. After this the game was played in the center of the field and neither of the teams got near enough the others goal to warrant a touch down.

All of the local boys played a hard game but the ends and back field showed up exceptionally well in this game and it was too bad that such effort as they displayed, brought no better success. The Antigo team seems to have too much weight for the Rhinelander boys.

McDERMOTT—STEFFEL WEDDING

John McDermott and Miss Mary Steffel were united in marriage at the Bohemian Catholic church in Antigo Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

William Shepard of this city acted as best man while Miss May Petrofsky, of Antigo waited on the bride.

After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the home of the bride's parents where the wedding breakfast was served.

Both of the young people are well known in this city. Mr. McDermott has been raised in Rhinelander. He now holds a position as book-keeper for the Rhinelander Refrigerator Co.

Mrs. McDermott is also well known in this city having made it her home part of the time for the past three years. The New North joins with the entire community in wishing them happiness.

NEW BUSINESS FIRM

Chas. J. Rantz, Architect of this city has formed an associate partnership with Alban & Hausler, Architects of St. Paul, Minn., with offices in the Merchants State Bank Building where Architect Rantz is at present located.

The firm name of said firm will be hereafter known as Alban & Hausler, and Chas. J. Rantz, Associate Architects, with offices at St. Paul, Minn., and Rhinelander, Wis.

Mrs. Fred Bloom entertained the South side Apron club at the home of J. Bloom on Keenan street last night. Cards were played and Mrs. John Ward was awarded first prize while Mrs. Charles Rogers carried off second honors.

INDIVIDUAL CUPS

School Boards Must Comply With Law Board Makes It Mandatory

The school officers of Oneida County, in many instances are violating the law regarding the use of drinking cups in the schools. We publish of the State Board of Health for the benefit of such officers.

Wisconsin's State Board of Health, at its Annual Meeting held Jan. 28, 1910, adopted the following rule prohibiting the use of the common drinking cup in schools and other public places:

"Rule 14. Whereas, it has been repeatedly demonstrated that the use of what is usually known as the common drinking cup is dangerous and is an undoubted source of communication of infectious diseases. Now, therefore, in the interest of the public health, be it ruled by the Wisconsin State Board of Health:

That the use of the common drinking cup on railroad trains, in railroad stations, in the public, parochial or private schools and in other educational institutions of the State of Wisconsin, is hereby prohibited from and after September 1, 1910."

FOREIGNER LOSES MONEY AND WATCH

Constable Put Behind Bars—Three Lakes People Most Indignant

Last Sunday was another day in which Three Lakes made history.

The unusual stir on our streets Sunday evening made some of our citizens wonder what was doing.

Assistant Officer Budney came in the reporter's way and we questioned him pretty closely. We learned from him that Constable Donahue had arrested a foreigner and after breaking in the town hall door with a timber he placed his prisoner in a cell; some little time after the prisoner was released, whereupon the released man complained to his native friends that he was minus some cash as well as a gold watch. This started things rolling. Constable Wyckoff deputized Victor Budney and Constable Donahue was soon located, and he received a demand to produce the watch, he soon agreed to go along to the town hall and assist in locating the missing time piece, he entered the cell to search the bunk and with a bliff his brother officers had him a captive! To make sure he would remain for the night they put on an additional lock—he stayed all night!

In the morning he was released, the cell searched, and the time piece recovered. However, Officer Donahue took the old man to Rhinelander where he was fined $5 and costs, something like $14.

Throwing all jokes aside, many of our people are fairly disgusted with the whole affair. Supervisor Nelson said: "I was an eye witness to the whole affair. It is the most disgraceful thing I have yet seen at Three Lakes. I will propose the removal of all of the present constables and the appointment of new ones in their places at our first town board meeting."—Forest Advance.

NEW TEN CENT STORE

Rhinelander is to have a large new ten cent store. The store building formerly occupied by the H. M. Buck Clothing Co. has been undergoing extensive repairs during the past two weeks in readiness for the Wells Co. Ten Cent Store. These people come here with a large experience along this line and are planning to have a modern up-to-date store in every particular.

This new emporium will be filled with useful articles. Nothing in the store will be less than five cents nor more than ten cents. The date of opening will be announced later.

CITY FATHERS DO BIG STROKE

New High School To Be Erected at Cost of $75,000—Aid Given City Attorney

The length of time taken at a council meeting is no indication of the amount of business transacted as shown at the regular meeting Tuesday night. Although the session closed in good season steps were taken which means much to the future of the city as shown by the resolution passed by unanimous vote which means a much needed new high school building.

Another resolution which passed without a dissenting vote gives power to the City Attorney to secure legal and engineering assistance in the suit of the Rhinelander Lighting Co. before the State Railroad Commission.

Resolved that a new high school building of an approximate cost of $75,000 be erected by and under the direction of the Board of Education on the site now held by the city for such purpose; and that within the limitations fixed by law, city bonds to be issued at such times and in such amounts as may be required by said board to meet the cost thereof.

Resolved further, That the joint committee of the council and Board of Education heretofore appointed be, and they are hereby, authorized to procure plans and specifications for said building, and to employ such engineering and other assistance as may be required in establishing grades and making preliminary surveys of said building site.

Resolved Further, That a certified copy of this resolution be transmitted to the Board of Education.

Resolved That the City Attorney be and he is hereby authorized to procure for and in behalf of the city such engineering and legal assistance as he may find advisable and proper in connection with the hearing before the Railroad Commission of the complaint of said city against the Rhinelander Lighting Company, now pending upon such terms as may be found by him to be reasonable and necessary.

Other matters of less importance were considered and will be given in the full proceedings next week.

Tomalty and Davis were granted a license to keep a saloon at the old stand formerly occupied by Fred Papineau.

"THE TRAVELING SALESMAN"

What should prove of unusual interest to the local theatre going public is the approaching appearance of James Forbes' latest comedy "The Traveling Salesman", which A. S. Stern will send to the Opera House next Tuesday night with the Original Robert E. O'Connor as the genial salesman. Although this comedy from the pen of the author of "The Chorus Lady" has been running steadily for over a year, it has spent nearly all its time in New York and Chicago. It registered a run of nine months in Gotham and Chicago gave it unequalled support for twenty-one weeks. All of which is sufficient evidence that Mr. Forbes has written a worthy successor of "The Chorus Lady".

RICHARDS IS PATROLED

Earl Richards, who was sentenced to a two year term in Waupun for grand larceny by Judge Reid fourteen months ago is again in the city. Several months ago friends of his in this city took the matter up with the pardon board and through their efforts he was paroled. The board appointed Fred Coon as his guardian and Mr. Coon will be responsible for his actions; he will also have to furnish or see that Richards has work until the time which he was supposed to serve has expired.

THE TRAVELING SALESMAN

Robert E. O'Connor in the laughing comedy success of the season, "The Traveling Salesman", by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady", will be the offering at the Opera House, next Tuesday, Nov. 14.

PROCLAMATIONS THANKSGIVING

The First Thanksgiving Proclamation By The Present Executive. Same Set Form As Used In Past

Another year of abundant harvests, good health, peace and prosperity has passed into history. For these great blessings the people of Wisconsin should publicly proclaim their gratitude to Him Who has provided so bountifully for their comfort and happiness.

At this time also we should remember to whom disaster has come, extend to them our sympathy, and from our abundance relieve their distress.

In accordance with law and long established custom, and in conformity with the proclamation of the president of the United States of America, I, Francis E. McGovern, governor of the state of Wisconsin, do hereby designate Thursday, the thirteenth day of November, 1911, as Thanksgiving day. I earnestly recommend that the people meet on that day in their usual places of worship, by praise and thanksgiving showing their gratitude to God, Who gives us sunshine and shower, seed time and harvest, and by acts of kindness and love acknowledging their kinship to every fellow being.

CRUSOE LEAVES STORE BUSINESS

Old Business Firm Retires After Nineteen Years in City

The first of the week the people of the community were surprised by an announcement from the Crusoe Department Store that it was to go out of business. This well known place of business was established in 1892, almost twenty years ago, and has been one of the reliable stores of the city ever since. Five years ago A. W. Crusoe became sole proprietor, and has continued in the sole ownership since.

The characteristic of the store has been its reliability from the day it opened. When bills were cast broadcast announcing bargains the purchasers had confidence in the quotations.

Now that a closing out sale is announced at reduced prices it means exactly what is said that goods will be sold at a bargain.

While Mr. Crusoe is to go out of the general store business he does not make any statement as to his future plans. It is hoped that Mr. Crusoe will take up other lines and remain in the city.

CHARITY BALL IS SUCCESS

The charity ball given by the lady Arabees was fairly well attended, about one hundred couple being present. A very fine concert was rendered by Richard and Louis Urban, violinists, and Anita Pittz, pianist. As all the bills of the dance are not settled it is not possible to give the net receipts.

COMMITTEE TO RECEIVE FUNDS

Help River Falls Sufferers—Rhinelander Should Do Share

At the council meeting Tuesday evening a motion was made and carried that a committee of three be appointed to collect funds for the aid of Black River Falls, and forward the same to the treasurer of the relief committee at Madison. The following committee was appointed: L. A. Leadbetter, C. P. Crosby, and John Sredler. Black River Falls is in need and we fully believe the people of Rhinelander should take steps at once to aid these sufferers. Let's lend an aiding hand and do it quickly by subscribing to a relief fund.

Mrs. L. J. Sawyer and Miss Vera Biaby left today for a visit with relatives in Ashland.

EVENTS OF WEEK IN OTHER TOWNS

Items of More or Less Importance Boiled Down From Neighboring Exchanges

Park Falls—

A lumber jack by the name of Joe Butler was found dead near the railroad tracks last week in such condition as to suggest foul play. The body was found near an eight foot embankment with cuts and bruises of suspicious nature. No relatives were found so his body was made a county charge.

Washburn—

The Postoffice at Washburn is to have a postal savings bank, Oct. 23. It is one of the few third class offices to become one but as rapidly as possible, it is the aim to establish all third class offices as such.

Bayfield—

The Bayfield Box & Lbr. Co. has closed after a cut of 5,000,000 ft. of hard wood and 2,600,000 ft. of soft wood. The Wasemith Lbr. Co. has purchased the Bayfield Mill Co. holdings and has established six camps, with the intention of cutting 2,000,000 ft. The lumbering in this section will therefore be confined to this company.

Ashland—

The new directory just completed indicates that the federal census of 1910 is somewhat amiss, as the recently completed directory gives Ashland 232 more names and now gives the city 11,826.

Stevens Point—

Petty larceny has been committed in various parts of the city, in one case, the thief obtained $83 from a purse. Efforts are being made to apprehend the guilty person or persons. Menomonie—

The Segerstrom Piano Manufacturing company of Minneapolis will this week begin the manufacture of pianos in its new plant in Menomonie. The new factory building, containing 50,000 feet of floor space completed. An output of twenty-five pianos a day and the employment of at least 200 men is the capacity of and costing about $50,000, has been the factory.

Mr. Segerstrom is a cousin of J. Segerstrom of this city and at one time had an extensive piano sale in Rhinelander, advertising liberally in the local papers.

Mattoon—

The Wisconsin Timber & Land Co. are willing to lease or donate a site for a manufacturing plant that will employ twenty or more men, the plant to be established at Mattoon.

Chippewa Falls—

In one month, the sugar factory has sliced 10,000 tons of beets. The factory is running day and night.

Tomahawk—

Tomahawk is loosed to put it in on the map. A mass meeting was recently called and was responded to by a large gathering of citizens, perhaps the largest public meeting ever held in the place. A president, a secretary and a treasurer were elected and committees on finance, dances, sports and welfare of Tomahawk were chosen. The organization is to be known as the Tomahawk Club and its object is to "Boost" the town.

CRANBERRIES GOING UP

Commission Concerns of Chicago Are Said to Have Concerned Market

Complaints have been made in Chicago that an illegal combination has been effected by certain commission concerns through which the price of cranberries has been advanced from $2.50 to $4.50 a barrel wholesale. It is said that the action may be prosecuted under the anti-trust law.

As a result of the "corner" or short yield, consumers will have to pay from 25 to 10 per cent more than last year for their Thanksgiving cranberry sauce.

Local commission men say that the advance in prices is partially due to the failure of the Cape Cod crop, which was seriously damaged by frost. Practically all the Wisconsin crop of berries was shipped to southern markets early in the season. Present prices average $2 a barrel higher than at the same time last year, and further advance is predicted before Christmas.

MOTHERS! READ!

It is not itching piles that alls YOU or YOUR CHILD. It's the PIN or SEAT WORM that causes you or your child to have rectal trouble. Soon after retiring for the night the pin worm appears. It bites and stings and causes scratching and aching. Mothers know what it means when your child cries out: "Mamma, something is biting me." And sure enough upon examining her child she finds the naughty white pin worm sharp pointed at both ends, embedded in the child's rectum. This worm causes nervousness to young and old people and the itching is not piles, but pin worms. The harmless remedy for this is STEKETEE'S PIN WORM DESTROYER.

Has Your Darling Child a Fever? First of all give it Steketee's Worm Destroyer. HAS IT A FOUL BREATH?

The saloons were open last Sunday afternoon from one to six and there seemed to be a general understanding that the Committee of Twelve had approved this step but from a notice in this week's New North, by the Committee of Twelve, another attitude is shown.

A surprise is sprung in English politics by the resignation of Arthur Balfour as leader of the reactionaries. News of his retirement created a tremendous sensation. It would seem that the days of the reactionaries or stalwarts are numbered all over the world. Think of attempting to make old China a republic. The masses are determined to have their own.

MINNESOTA LOOK THE CHAMPIONS

The foot ball dope makers were surprised by the defeat of Harvard by Princeton in the East Saturday, and by the big score that Minnesota piled up against Chicago. This put Chicago out of the race for the championship team in the West as Wisconsin won over Iowa by a small score, whereas Minnesota defeated Iowa a short time ago by a large score. The enthusiasts who think Wisconsin will defeat Minnesota at Madison the 18th, seem to base their failure on good luck and prejudice rather than facts. All Wisconsin Alumni would be delighted to see Wisconsin the champion but we fear the odds are against her.

VOTERS SHOULD LOCATE STATION

Just as a more is made to erect a new Soo Station on the west side the coils of last year's opposition to this location began to burst into flames again. While a few seem to want the station over the river we fully be-

Regarding Prices

In the eye service cost should be regarded secondary consideration.

The skill and experience of the person to whom you trust your eyes should primarily be considered.

Yet, if price is a consideration, call and ask about my prices, and you will find them most reasonable for the high grade of service rendered.

J. Segerstrom Optometrist

RHINELANDER, - WIS.

Here the majority of the people feel the injustice of this location. The best way to settle this would be to take a vote of the city to decide and not let a few satisfy their pleasures at the expense of many. If the opposition wish to take strenuous steps, they can bring the whole matter before the Railroad Commission and let them decide. We have no personal interest in this case except as residents of Rhinelander.

PERSONAL REASONS FOR ATTACK

Although slurring insinuations have been made in the local "special interest organ" regarding the character of some of the entertainments at our local theaters, we believe our playhouse manager would not intentionally put anything before the public that is not the best. It has been through the splendid grade and excellent selection of pictures that Mr. Zander has built up a liberal patronage out of a small beginning and it is a most contemptible trick to try to tear it down, simply because the special interest sheet does not get the printing to do but it is the method of this organ and its backers to attempt to ruin if they can not rule. It was this spirit that put this sheet into existence in this community.

The fact is, the pictures are all selected and we believe it is far from the intention of Mr. Zander to ever let a vulgar picture come before a gathering. Every picture shown has been before a Board of Censorship which passes on them and in on instance this board cast aside a picture costing thousands of dollars. Beware of the true motive of this organ that attacks the character of Mr. Zander's shows.

WIS. COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The Des Moines plan—in Des Moines and elsewhere—seems to show a vast superiority over the old style American city charter. Let us now direct attention to the Wisconsin Plan. As originally enacted, we thought the Wisconsin law a bad one, and said so. As amended, we recommend it to the cities of the state as vastly better than the old plan, and we ask the rest of the world to consider it.

The Wisconsin plan is perfection from the short ballot view point. After the first election the law contemplates the choice of only one commissioner, every two years. The newly elected member takes his seat with two old commissioners, one of whom has two years to serve, and one four; the new man being secure in his place for six years—unless! The "unless" was put in last winter by amendment, and is the Recall. The Initiative and Referendum went in with the Recall.

A commission of three, with fairly adequate salaries, six-year terms, one expiring every two years—and direct drive on both action and inaction through popular vote—such is the plan adopted by La Crosse. It seems like an admirably simple and workable plan.—La Follette's Weekly.

"WHO SHOULD RESIGN?"

In an editorial of The New North of Oct. 19 ch. 69, 1909 was quoted which reads:

"No person shall be eligible to any city office who directly or indirectly has any pecuniary interest in any contract for furnishing heat, light, water power, or any other public service to or for such city or is stock holder in any corporation which has any such contract.

In an editorial of the News of November 3, the following appears:

In the issue of The New North of Oct. 19, F. A. Lowell, editor and manager for that paper, as well as county superintendent of schools, editorially quotes a portion of a state law which forbids city officials from holding a position in public service corporations. Mr. Lowell probably never noticed another law enacted by the legislature of 1911, which should interest him more. We quote the entire law, word for word.

The substance of which reads: No county or district superintendent shall engage in teaching during the time for which he was elected nor engage in any profession or occupation. A violation of any of the prohibitive provisions of this act shall subject the offender to removal from office.

E. O. Brown, one of the chief push of the News, holds a city office and at the same time he is a stock holder and president of the Rhinelander Power Company which directly furnishes power to the city and, also indirectly furnishes power to the schools for running motors. Who should resign?

If F. A. Lowell is violating the law let little man Friday of the News at the command of his masters prosecute him or why not the real managers themselves do it?

ODIOUS HISTORICAL COMPARISON

James Buchanan assumed the presidency on March 4th, 1857, when the country was on the eve of a national crisis over slavery and free territory after a struggle of twenty years. He chose "the middle of the road" but secretly allied himself with slavery and against liberty.

He pointed the people to the courts, where the Dred Scott case was pending, and, having been privately informed by Justice Grier that the decision would be in favor of slavery, he said in his inaugural address:

"The question will be speedily and finally settled. To their decision (the supreme court's) in compliance with all good citizens, I shall cheerfully submit, whatever it is."

He proceeded to say:

Most happy will it be for the country when the public mind shall be diverted from this question to others of more pressing and practical importance. Should the agitation continue, it may eventually endanger the personal safety of a large portion of our countrymen where the institution exists. Let every Union-loving man, therefore exert his best influence to suppress this agitation which, since the recent legislation of Congress, is without legitimate object."

Could there be a closer historical parallel between the attitude of James Buchanan and that of William H. Taft?

Taft in 1911, like Buchanan, in 1857, at the head of the government on the eve of a national crisis, after 20 years of agitation. Then it was slavery; now, money and the trusts.

Taft, like Buchanan, pretends to take "the middle of the road," though secretly allied with the interests.

Taft, like Buchanan, points the people to the courts and pretends to believe that the decision of the supreme court in the oil and tobacco cases "settles the question speedily and finally." He says:

"I love judges and I love courts. They are my ideals on earth of what we shall meet in heaven under a just God." He raves against those who would question the dictum of the courts on great issues of human liberty.

Taft, like Buchanan, virtually commands us to "suppress the agitation" lest harm come, not to the large portion of our countrymen, and he adds the threat of panic

The Little Circus Rider

By PEGGY POWERS

"The circus is in town," announced Sidney.

"The last time I was at a circus," answered Meriven, "was when I was a little shaver with but a dime of my own. All morning I helped around the tent, fed the animals, brought pail after pail of water to the elephants, arranged the seats for the crowd and one hundred and one things in return for a bit of pasteboard which would admit one in the afternoon to the wonders of circudom."

"Do you still remember how wonderful and magnificent it all seemed?"

"Hardly; my labors tired me out so that with all the noise, the din, the shouting and the music of the band, I slept through the entire performance."

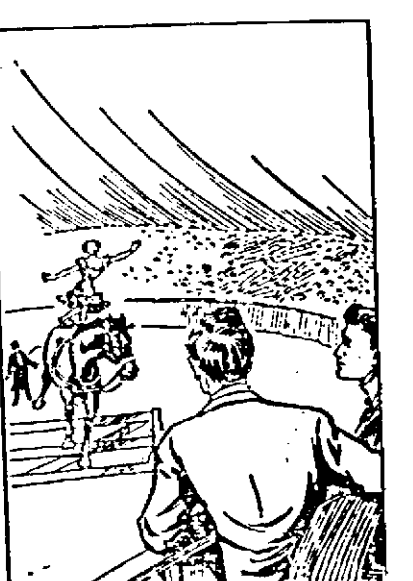

"Let's go to the show this evening," said Sidney. "I was presented with two box seat tickets for allowing some posters of thrillers in the window of our shop."

Meriven and Sidney were astounded at the number of grown-ups present at the circus, how really fascinating the circus was to adults and how bewildering to try to watch the three rings at one time.

"The girl on that white horse is a marvel. So graceful and supple; she rides as easily as if she was seated in a rocking chair. How modest she is; nothing 'circus' about her," said Meriven.

"She can't be more than sixteen," answered his friend.

"Outrageous for a girl no more than sixteen years of age to waste her rough and beauty in a traveling show. How in the world did she happen to join a circus! Sometimes whole families travel together, but there is no one else with the same name on the program."

"Look, that horse kicked 'Mademoiselle La Tour,'" exclaimed Meriven, excitedly. "Is she hurt? No, though that brave child must have felt the tumble; she's up again smiling and bowing to the crowd as if nothing had happened."

"She's a brave one," said Meriven, joining the applause.

The little circus rider was constantly in Meriven's thoughts, and the following evening found him again in the box. "No only that night, but for four consecutive performances did he await the entrance of the darling young equestrienne."

Finally his desire to know something of the girl drew him to the box office, where he inquired: "If it were possible to assist her in some manner that she could earn her living in a less perilous fashion or probably make it possible for her to continue her neglected education."

"I am sure your intentions are most honorable, young man, but don't waste your sympathy on 'Mademoiselle La Tour,' who is the wife of the leading clown in the show. They both work double time to help pay their son's way through college. Now if you would like to meet their daughter," continued the manager, "who is standing over there with her young baby in her arms talking to her husband, 'the trapeze artist,' I'll be glad to introduce you."

"No, thank you," said Meriven; as he turned away from the box office. "How much wiser I was as a little kid to sleep through the whole show than wasting my pity on some young man's mother and spending eight dollars for box seats to plan the future education of that baby's grandmother."

Hurried Eating.

One of the causes which leads to over-eating, especially among men and busy people generally, is the haste which frequently attends their meals. There is no enemy of over-eating like deliberation. If any of you doubt this, just try it! Eat slowly, masticating your food carefully, and see if you don't satisfy your appetite with less than you do when you gulp down each hurried mouthful. But more time might be given to eating than is often granted by busy persons. You cannot enjoy your food when you eat it in a rush, and you spoil yourself for all future enjoyment by upsetting your digestive apparatus. When you eat slowly you accomplish two ends, for you eat less and have more pleasure in the process.

Have you considered what would happen to yourself, your family or your business, if you should become disabled by accident or a long period of sickness?

Protect yourself by an accident and sickness policy. The cost is not large. Don't put it off. And while you are about it get the best. The cost is no higher—perhaps even less.

As was expected from moisture conditions the crops in the central, northern and western parts of the state show a better yield than in the south-west, but because of the excessive rainfall in some parts the quality was impaired.

"Potatoes, tobacco, corn and sugar beets seem to have been the most successful for the season, potatoes making an exceptional yield of 134 bushels per acre.

"Hay yielded well but frequent rains made it well nigh impossible to cure perfectly.

"The apple crop is with few exceptions good over the entire state and probably a larger number of bushels will be harvested than ever in this state."

Escaped in Time

James had paid Gertrude marked attention while she was visiting her aunt. Though others knew to a certainty that he intended proposing to the charming stranger, James himself was undecided.

"Meeting a girl at dances, only seeing her with her company manners on, isn't conducive to really knowing her," soliloquized James. "How can I tell that like the girl who when she was good, was very very good and when she was bad she was horrid. I'll solve the enigma. Accept her invitation to spend a few days at her country home. The rest will do me good. Then after that if we prove congenial, me for a benedict."

Gertrude was a vision of loveliness when she greeted her admirer at the station.

"So delighted you came," she said welcoming him with a joyful face. "We needed another for our tennis match."

"I'm too tired to play," commenced James.

"Don't be disagreeable but hurry; they're waiting for us," returned Gertrude.

After the game, at which the newcomer was badly beaten, Gertrude suggested a swimming contest.

"I'd rather not," complained James. "Let's sit in that inviting hammock."

"Your no sport, don't be a ditcher," said one of the party.

"If you insist, all right," answered James.

So in swimming they went. Every one except James enjoyed the cool refreshing waves. But he never did enjoy anything he didn't want to do.

At dinner Gertrude commented upon the fact that her guest did not appear in a white suit.

"I thought I suited you all right," he replied.

"No, you seem to dislike all the things I find pleasure in. For instance, would you like to take a tramp through the woods?"

"Surely, let's start early in the morning," agreed James, glad for an opportunity to be alone with Gertrude.

After being abused for three hours because he insisted upon tramping his partner's ace, James retired, to be awakened at dawn by a gentle knock at his door.

"Hurry, I'm all ready," called Gertrude.

James jumped helter-skelter into his clothes and found Gertrude waiting for him, looking not quite as pretty as she had in the favorable gaslight.

After walking a couple of miles James protested that he felt weary and hungry.

"There's an apple orchard about a half-mile from here. We'll get some apples," said Gertrude, for nothing could deter her from continuing her walk.

A very sober couple appeared on the porch a few hours later. After a hearty breakfast Gertrude begged James to go fishing. He had to row around the lake for the rest of the morning in the broiling sun and all they caught were two small perch.

"Some strenuous life," he commented as the boat neared the landing and he was becoming bored by Gertrude's incessant talking of topics which did not interest him.

"These stunts are an everyday occurrence. Wouldn't you like to live this simple life?" questioned Gertrude.

"Not to my taste."

"The boys expect you to play in their baseball game," Gertrude called after James as he left her.

The baseball over Gertrude appeared with her golf bag requesting James to play with her. They chased the ball around the links until it started to pour rain in torrents.

"It's pouring," cried James.

"Oh, we always play in the rain," answered Gertrude.

Drenched to the skin they started home.

"What's the trouble with your face?" asked Gertrude.

"I don't know, it feels all face."

"It's swollen and has red patches all over it. Maybe its poison ivy."

After consulting the village doctor, who informed him that he had most likely touched some ivy in the woods and had a bad case of poisoning, James returned home on the next train to remain in the house for a week suffering intensely.

When James read of Gertrude's engagement to Harold Linton, champion of the football players, he heaved a sigh of relief.

"Thanks to that poison ivy I escaped in time. If I was so tired out in a couple of days how could I have stood it for a life time?"

Three petrified redwood trees that have been pronounced the very largest in the world that have thus far been discovered have just been uncovered from the debris of the mountain side, only a short distance from the famous Bohemian Club Grove in Sonoma county, California. This point is near the little town of Occident.

One of these prehistoric monsters, that make the pyramids of Egypt modern by comparison in their ages, measures 23 feet in diameter and is 350 feet in length. The two other petrified trees are 12 and 12 feet in diameter, respectively.—Scientific American.

SACRED CONCERT PLEASES MANY

Packed House Listens to Sweet
Music—Much Credit Due Musicians

Last Sunday evening the capacity of the Congregational church was taxed, both auditorium and the adjoining lecture room being filled. It is estimated that fully four hundred people were present to listen to the concert of sacred music, a program of which appeared in the New North last week. The program was carried out as announced with the exception that, on account of sickness, Byron Arnold was unable to take his place in the male quartette; however, his part was acceptably taken by Prof. Harrison. Every number on the entire program was well rendered. The male quartette appeared four times, and every number was highly appreciated by the large audience. Two instrumental quartettes by Miss McQueen at the pipe-organ, Mrs. Harrison at the piano, Mr. Hayner with the viola, and Mr. Reik with the violin were exceptionally well received. Mr. LaMotte's violin solo was fully up to the high standard of the rest of the program. The tenor solo by Mr. Hurn and the soprano solo by Mrs. Reeves were well rendered and served to add most agreeable variety to the program. The duet by Wilson and Tompkins was one of the best numbers of the evening. The quintette by Mrs. Reeves, Mrs. Richards, Miss Foster, Mr. Tompkins, and Mr. Harrison was remarkable for the fine blending of the voices, and the lofty sentiment of the selection. Interspersed with the various numbers by the choir two hymns were sung in which the congregation joined; also a responsive service, with prayer and short address by the pastor.

Much credit is due the musicians who took part in this concert, and we are glad to learn that it is planned to give a concert each month, probably on the first Sunday evening of the month.

ATTRACTIONS AT THEATERS

Mr. Zander Aims To Give Rhinelanders
People Different Programs

Owing to the fact that the illustrated songs which are being sent out by the film houses throughout the country have become so monotonous, the moving picture theaters are cutting out the illustrated songs from their programs. It is due to this fact that H. C. Zander has decided to dispense with these slides. Mr. Zander has a plan that he intends trying out and one which he thinks will prove more pleasing to his audiences. It is to have a talented singer or singers come here from the circuits out of Chicago, twice a month. These people will be artists in their line and only the best talent will be secured. This it is thought will be far more pleasing than the old worn out sentimental songs which are given with the illustrated slides.

The show, Paid in Full, which was looked to appear at the Opera House the 15th of this month has canceled the engagement on account of changing their route. In their place the management have succeeded in securing the play that made such a tremendous hit in Milwaukee this fall, The Traveling Salesman.

The Burgess Stock Company which is appearing at the Grand Opera House this week has been showing to large audiences. The company is a good one and they have a fine repertoire. Besides this they carry a large quantity of scenery of their own—this adds materially to their plays.

LAW PRACTICALLY UNCHANGED

The open season for deer in Wisconsin begins on Nov. 11. The law remains practically the same in all material respects—one deer for each hunter and no dogs are allowed around any hunting or logging camp during the deer season or during the entire month of November. Deer are about as numerous as ever, according to reports received from the back woods, and there will doubtless be as many hunters after them as in former years.

Love Works by Wire

By M. J. Phillips

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press

"Hello," said Nell Blanding; "is this Broad five-five-eight-seven?"
"Nine" and "five" sound much alike, especially when the line is not working well. A girl's voice at the other end of the line said "Yes," in that far-away, eerie, impersonal tone that a contrary telephone will sometimes impart.

"This is the Williams-Valentine Machine company. Please send one of your trucks down for a pickup."

"Just a moment, please," returned the other voice, a little more distinctly, "you have the wrong number. This is Broad five-five-eight-seven."

"Oh!" ejaculated Blanding; "I wanted five-five instead of five-five. Beg pardon."

"Granted—Mr. Blanding!"
Blanding secured the express company's office and delivered his message before allowing himself to ponder on this most surprising rejoinder. The girl with the faraway voice knew his name.

He was a humble unit in the big office force of the Williams-Valentine company. He knew scarcely a score of persons in the city's swarming hundred-thousands, and certainly, he recalled to himself, not a girl with so pleasant and well-modulated a voice.

Blanding looked about the office speculatively. Was it a joke of one of the stenographers, using another phone crossed with his? No. All were at their accustomed places. Perhaps, then, his conversation had been carried on with the private office of Mr. Williams or Mr. Valentine.

But this guess proved incorrect. The doors were open; from the president's office came the urgent click of Miss Peters' typewriter. From the other room sounded the steady drone of Mr. Valentine's voice as he dictated to Miss Marion.

Nell Blanding put the mystery away for pondering during less urgent moments. There was work to do now. He lay awake half that night in his narrow, stifling hall bedroom. But the barking heat seemed more bearable than usual. He had the incident of the day to think about.

The next day, when the hands of the clock pointed to 11 Blanding found it necessary to call the express company again.

He smiled as he took down the receiver. It was just this hour yesterday he had called, and had been given the wrong number. Of course the incident was closed, as far as he was concerned. In due time he would undoubtedly find out who that girl was.

"Number," said Central.

Blanding replied "Broad five-five-eight-seven."

He realized, before the words had barely passed his lips that he had called the number which had been uppermost in his mind for 24 hours.

"Broad five-five-eight-seven," said the girl's voice, as familiar to Blanding's waiting ear as though he had been hearing it for years.

"Oceanic Express company?" he queried, craftily.

Came a little ripple of laughter. "No, Mr. Blanding; you have the wrong number—again."

"Who is this?" he demanded boldly.

"Broad five-five-eight-seven," came the demure reply.

"Yes, but who is that?"

"Why don't you look it up in the book?" was the retort, in a voice fairly bubbling with mischief. He heard the receiver click back on the hook.

Why, indeed? It would be a monumental task, as he divined by a glance at the ponderous, blue-bound book.

Blanding loitered that night until he was the last person in the office. Then he took the telephone book from its shelf and hurried out with it.

After midnight he found the number and its complement: "Frank Zollinski, 325 Twenty-fifth street."

That didn't sound very encouraging; but then, with swift loyalty he told himself that it would be all right. He fell asleep and dreamed about a girl of wonderful beauty with a voice of gold.

he stopped in front of the number. It was a small, dingy brick store in a neighborhood of small, dingy brick stores. Over the store was a big sign: "Frank Zollinski, Fine Wines and Liquors."

He rebounded happily when he saw that the place was empty, and that a "To Rent" sign was displayed prominently in the window. Of course! The phone number had been transferred to another subscriber, whose name was not yet in the book.

That day he called Broad 5587 without subterfuge. The girl was pleased to be serious.

"You mustn't think I am doing something I shouldn't," she said. "Mamma knows I have talked to you. And since we are acquainted—"

"I know you!" interrupted the mystified Blanding.

"Yes, indeed. How easily you forget your friends!"

The habit of talking with the girl daily was now established. They were not long chats, never more than a few minutes. But they brightened his labors materially.

Blanding made no further efforts to discover her identity. He had a half-superstitious feeling that in time it would be revealed.

Insensibly she grew deeply into his confidence. He told her of his home, his hopes and ambitions; of his mother and father.

In Blanding's mind a certain dream of the future began to form itself, a dream in which himself and the girl whose voice only he knew were the central figures. And that dream spurred him to promotion and more pay.

He was pegging away one evening, long after the others had left, for there was work which could not be put over, when the president himself came in. Mr. Williams started at the sight of the shirt-sleeved figure beneath the single light.

"Still at it, Blanding?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, don't work too hard. We're going to need you in the future more than we do now. I guess you've done enough for tonight. I want you to do a little errand for me."

"All right, sir," said Nell.

"I'd like to have you go up to the house with this package for Mrs. Williams. It's pretty valuable, and I don't want to entrust it to an ordinary messenger. You can ride in my car."

"Yes, sir."

"I'll tell them you're coming," and he took the telephone receiver down. "Broad five-five-eight-seven, please."

So that was the solution of his mystery! Broad 5587 was Mr. Williams' phone; then the girl with whom he had been talking each day for weeks was the president's daughter, Maryette Williams.

He had met her once in the office with her mother. To him she had been a beautiful vision as unattainable as the farthest star. And yet—she liked him. Their daily talks proved that.

While he—he loved her, because she was his mate, intended for him since the world was fashioned. She was near to loving him, too—she would care for him dearly. That glorious certainty thrilled him.

Back in the office Williams was saying over the phone:

"I've just sent young Blanding up to the house, mother. If you like him, invite him to call. He's worth a dozen of the average chaps of the day. He's got the stuff that partners are made of."

"You've prejudiced me already in his favor," replied Mrs. Williams.

"I don't suppose he has $300 to his name," mused the president.

His wife's voice unconsciously took on a note of tenderness when she replied: "Neither had you, Fred, when we were married!"

True Bond of Marriage.

"Sacred things not performed sincerely as they ought are in no way acceptable to God in their outward formality. If personal duties be not truly done, the fault is in ourselves; but marriage to be a true and pious marriage is not in the single power of any person; the essence whereof as of all other covenants is in relation to another; the making and maintaining causes thereof are all mutual, and must be a communion of spiritual and temporal comforts. If, then, either of them cannot or obstinately will not be answerable in these duties, so as that the other can have no peaceful living, or enduring the want of what he justly seeks and sees no hope, then from that dwelling love, which is the soul of wedlock, takes his flight, leaving only some cold performances of civil and common respects, but the true bond of marriage, if there were ever any there, is already burst like a rotten thread."—John Milton.

What Papa Wanted.

Little Marjorie's grandfather, a retired caddyman, was writing to her father, who was a traveling man. Marjorie watched his serious face and slow moving pen for several minutes, growing more restless as she thought over the matter.

"Grandpa," she said finally, "don't you write to papa. Let mamma write to him."

"Why?" asked her grandfather.

"Why don't you want me to write to your father?"

"Well," Marjorie answered, after a slight hesitation, "you always tell him about God, and it's me he wants to hear about."—Lippincott's Magazine.

'Tis False.

"She claims she can prove that at the time the crime was committed her little girl was brushing her hair."

"That proves an alibi for her hair, but how about herself?"

Obliging One's Friends

Yarrington promised his friends to buy the box they wanted for one day at the automobile races. The best thing Yarrington does is to oblige his friends, and all the others had said they had no time to attend to the matter.

The broker he went to said that while boxes were very scarce, he thought by paying a premium he might be able to wrench one by main force from the eager throngs that were battling for them, provided Yarrington would take it for the two days. When he escaped from the broker Yarrington had parted with $40, but he figured on quickly disposing of the box for Friday, and the $20 that would be left was not much split up among the crowd.

He had his first jolt the next morning when Plenti telephoned that imperative business called him to San Francisco, so his name must be scratched off the list. At noon Kernack called up to say there was a sudden rush of business at the office and it was absolutely impossible for him to get away Saturday, so Yarrington must count him out. At three Woodmere called up to say that since some of the party could not go he thought they might as well call off the party.

After Yarrington had confided some bitter things to himself over the treachery of humanity in general he hunted up the broker and asked him to take back the tickets. He had no compunction about this, as there was such a demand for them. The broker smoothly said he had such a quantity of boxes on hand that he really could not think of paying the full price for Yarrington's, but that he would at great personal sacrifice give Yarrington $10 for it.

Thereupon Yarrington said a few sharp things and departed, resolved to sell the tickets himself since selling was so much more profitable than buying.

He called up Wattles and asked if he didn't want a box for one day at the automobile races. Wattles jumped at the chance, so Yarrington sent over the tickets and a bill for $20. Wattles nearly tore the telephone out by the roots and the boy with the tickets came back looking very much as though he had been shot out of a gun.

It seemed that Wattles thought Yarrington was giving him the box, and so the bill offended him hugely.

After that Yarrington heard of a man who wanted to go to the races, and promised to send over the tickets. Before he did so Kernack phoned that on no account was Yarrington to dispose of the box, as he had some friends to whom he had promised it. After Yarrington had told the other man that he could not have the tickets Kernack called up to say that his friends were leaving town and he didn't want the box after all.

By this time Yarrington was in an exceedingly tense and nervous state and hated the world vehemently. He was a cynic on the subject of friendship and desperate as regards his $40. It was manifestly impossible for him to stand on the street corner and wave the tickets in the faces of the passers-by, but he hit on another plan.

Taking the office boy into a corner he thrust the hated tickets into his hands.

"You go out there to the track," he ordered, "and sell these tickets for what you can get. Don't you dare come back with them, because if I ever set eyes on them again I can't answer for the result."

A little later Woodmere telephoned that he wanted the seats for his cousin's family, and when he learned that they were unavailable he said that Yarrington might think that was the right way to treat a friend of long standing, but as for himself he had his own opinion of such conduct. He said that Yarrington might have known he would want the tickets if Yarrington had given the matter the slightest thought.

When the office boy came back that night he looked haggard. He said that by telling the people he was the only support of three widowed mothers and eight brothers and sisters he had sold the Friday tickets among the throng at the track for a paltry dollar apiece. He said he had intended to invest in one himself, but that in a lucky moment he had hunted out the box and sat in it. He regretted to say that it was the very worst one there for position and that after he had found he would have an unrestricted view of one post, a corner of fence and a blank wall he decided he would not buy a ticket.

"What did you do with the Saturday tickets?" Yarrington asked in a hollow voice.

The office boy burst into tears. "I lost 'em!" he sobbed.

"Well, that's lucky, anyway," said Yarrington.

A Brooklyn magistrate has decided that cucumbers are fruit. If they would grow on a tree this would establish a workable theory that they accomplished the fall of man. They have frequently done so since.
